The Arthur Capper Cooperative Center was established in 1984 through a public-private partnership between the Kansas Cooperative Council and the Department of Agricultural Economics. The Center's primary goal is to enhance society's understanding of the nature and role of cooperatives. We strive to develop and deliver innovative and integrated research and educational programs that are of direct interest to cooperatives. To do so, we encourage and need an open dialogue between Kansas State University, cooperative leaders in Kansas and other university and industry contacts across the United States.
